

Planning a Mexican beach vacation? Whether you have a penchant for romance, eco-activities, epicurean delights, or you just crave being in the center of the action, here are four resorts that have your interests in mind. After all, you can't spend every waking minute by the ocean under a palapa.

For the Eco-Tourist: Casa Chablé

This 10-room eco-retreat opened earlier this year in the Sian Ka'an biosphere, a UNESCO World Heritage site whose Maya name translates to "gate to heaven." Located 22 miles south of Tulum, the biosphere is flanked by a white-sand beach on one side and a tropical jungle on the other, with wetlands, mangroves, cenotes, forested islets, beaches and lagoons and bays intersected by the Mesoamerican Barrier Reef. During your stay you may encounter dolphins, manatees, turtles, tropical fish and migratory birds, and getting there requires a 35-minute speedboat ride. After you arrive, you'll be taken to one of five stand-alone beachfront bungalows with outdoor showers; larger groups can book the main villa housing five guest suites. In addition to a restaurant, you'll find an oceanfront wellness cabana; gym; outdoor wellness esplanade for yoga and meditation; a rooftop lounge; and a private beach outfitted with canopied daybeds, tipis and hammocks.

<https://www.globaltravelerusa.com/4-mexican-beach-getaways-for-every-type-of-traveler/>