

Dear Country and Town House,

It's Blue Monday next week, i.e. 'the most depressing day of the year'. Whether you dismiss it as pseudoscience or a simple marketing ploy, it's supposedly when everyone books their sun-soaked adventures for the year ahead – and we know we're in need of a holiday to look forward to.

So, where will it be? Before the New Year dawned, we forecasted the trends that will fuel our travel choices, plus the destinations travellers will be plotting to visit in 2024, from TikTok's favourite destination dupes, to the eco-friendly spots experiencing renewed interest, to the new flight routes transforming under-the-radar destinations into the hottest place to be.

If you'd like your trips to be tailor-made and infused with luxury, look no further than Turquoise Holidays, the experts in unique holidays and experiences, from honeymoon celebrations to full family excursions.

Here are eight ideas for your 2024 travels.

Enjoy,

Fiona

2024 TRAVEL PLANS

Casa Chable, Mexico

Experience a new side of the Caribbean in Mexico. The Riviera Maya – a 120 km stretch of turquoise waters and white sand beaches – makes up the eastern side of the Yucatan peninsula, which splits the Gulf of Mexico from the Caribbean Sea, home to Cancun and Tulum. Casa Chable is one of a number of luxurious hotels drawing sunseekers to the region, with The St. Regis Kanai Resort and Maroma, A Belmond Hotel to choose from, too. Make the most of it with the final section of the Maya Train project, connecting Cancun to Tulum and taking in several historic spots along the way.
